IDEAS FROM AROUND THE CITY

Local Champions Complete Program

Eighteen participants of the 2023 Local Champions program were recently celebrated as they completed the six-month program. The cohort learned skills ranging from facilitation and group consensus-making to conflict resolution and writing successful grant applications. They received first-hand experience putting together a large group placemaking project and worked in smaller groups to produce four community projects during their 3-month practicum. The projects included teaching people about pickling for food preservation, a workshop on how to make and plant seed balls, designing and building a new multi-use platform in Arbutus Park and running a bike skills event. At the celebration, Mayor Alto spoke about the importance of leadership at the grassroots level and how impressed she was with the caliber of projects the participants undertook as their practicum project. The Local Champions program will re-open for applications in early 2024.

Community Impact Awards

The City's Neighbourhood Team created a new award to acknowledge residents who have made long-term contributions to improving their neighbourhood. Six residents were recognized in 2023 at the Local Champions celebration event. Recipients, chosen from across the city, are John O'Brien, Robert Tornack, Kathryn Pankowski, Teale Phelps Bondaroff, Jack Meredith and Patti Parkhouse. This annual award will be accepting nominations from the public in the spring of 2024 so keep an eye open for those people who are actively making Victoria a better city. Congratulations to the 2023 recipients!

IDEAS FROM FURTHER ABROAD

Parisian Grassroots Initiative Promotes Neighbourliness

Exciting experiments to increase local sociability are happening in Paris. Across an area of roughly 50 streets in the city's 14th arrondissement, over 1,200 neighbours have connected for everything from sharing communal dinners to swapping pet care thanks to the grassroots organization Republic of Super Neighbours. The organization's founder Patrick Bernard says the rise of conviviality can provide urban benefits ranging from combating loneliness to fighting food insecurity. One recently completed project saw neighbours transforming an underused plaza into a gathering place. More details on this story can be found here.
